Paula Robinson started her career as a model and marketing consultant in 1971. By 1983, she found herself leaving a position as talk show host with WILD AM 1090 radio to study the methods and social impact of broadcast media with Mass College of Art, Emerson College, Suffolk University, Harvard & MIT. Her long-term vision paid off when she became Director of Public Relations for Fox Broadcasting. Robinson's goals to teach to Public Relations and Broadcast Media to underserved communities became a reality a year after incorporating IITE in 1995. Retiring to consult full-time, she developed a number of training centers and learning models for agencies and colleges. Paula Robinson has taken the best practices from her career and experiences online to provide free and open access to learning the culture of WORLD-CLASS Public Relations.
